Conference Overview

ICFA 2019 gives an exciting opportunity to meet with like-minded people and industry peers. This Conference will bring together people from all different geographical areas to learn, discuss and explore wisdom in the direction of aquaculture.

Call for Papers

The 6th International Conference on Fisheries and Aquaculture 2019 – (ICFA 2019) invites Academicians, researchers, students, industry experts, policy makers, professionals and enthusiastic attendees send original research abstracts, case studies formatted according to the given format. The conference will be held from 22nd – 23rd August 2019 in Bangkok, Thailand under the theme “Sustainable Aquaculture: Nutritional Security and Exports”.

The fisheries and aquaculture sector is expected to (i) bridge the gap between supply and demand of protein needs of ever-growing world population and (ii) increase its export contribution. The fact that growing economies are exporting high value seafood in part to achieve the broader goal of ending poverty, while achieving the food security goal by retaining and importing lower value seafood, has become an overarching trend. Currently, the sector is facing certain challenges, including its actual and perceived sustainability, disease out-breaks, and fluctuating global prices in changing macro-economic scenario, competition from other resource users and global trade wars. Therefore, we need to think forward by adopting new technologies, understanding the role of research and development, and extending and/or disseminating latest research to primary producers.

The main theme of the conference would focus on so called, bifurcated theme of domestic versus export production strategies and discuss the synergies between domestic nutritional needs and need to improve export earnings. This will be achieved by networking, presenting the latest research and panel discussions on the strategies to ensure maximum profitability of the sector. Such strategies may not only encompass technologies to increase productivity but also strategies for value adding to increase profitability, total utilisation of the harvested resource by looking at new ways to use processing off cuts, and development of supply chain strategies such as digital traceability or forensic authentication of provenance to prevent substitution and supply chain mismanagement, thereby with the potential to attract premium pricing. The conference will also discuss and record all the necessary steps forward to a new era of modern technology to improve productivity while considering environment and social impacts.

At the end of the conference the recommendation will be recorded and made available for policy makers in the region.

Program Highlights

The 6th International Conference on Fisheries and Aquaculture 2019 (ICFA 2019) is designed with the objective of not only serving as a platform for participants to present their research paper but is a platform that is considered to be a knowledge hub together with special features that is aimed at enhancing the knowledge with a purpose of developing the career of the participants attending the Conference. The featured events of ICFA 2019 are as follows;

Workshop on Important statistical methods used in research using SPSS

This workshop aims to assist in the development of the skills needed to write and submit scientific manuscripts with the ultimate goal to improve the dissemination of research and enhance knowledge sharing. The workshop will provide the participants with insight and training in the processes required to successfully publish a scientific article.

Workshop on Seafood Cold Chain Management and Quality Monitoring

Cold chain management has become more and more important in national and international supply chain management strategies in Fisheries and Aquaculture. Implementation of innovative technologies and methods to monitor quality and safety parameters from production to consumption is of vital importance. This workshop gives you the opportunity to learn the latest technology in seafood cold chain management.

Workshop on Black Soldier Fly Larvae (BSFL) in Aquaculture

Insect protein is a sustainable alternative to fishmeal that is rapidly gaining traction around the world. This workshop will cover the basics of how Black Soldier Fly Larvae (BSFL) is raised at a commercial scale, as well as how best to use BSFL products such as protein meals and oil.

PANEL DISCUSSION ON Water Scarcity and Sustainable Aquaculture

Water scarcity is the greatest challenge of our time. The scarcity of availability and access to water has led to the development of innovative, integrated aquaculture-agriculture systems that make the best and most complete use of precious water resources. Water should not be wasted. Moreover, integrating different systems to produce multiple products with the same water increases efficiency.

There are many ways to combine aquaculture and agriculture, but commonly farmers use closed systems to maximize their use of water resources. Developing recirculating freshwater system could reduce the reliance of too much of water. Plus, integrated farming system, where crops and fish can use same body of water can be recirculated between them. Often, vegetables are irrigated with the same water used to raise the fish. The added bonus is that the water is fertilized from the fish waste, becoming rich in organic nutrients, and this 'fertilized' water increases plant production and decreases the need for additional fertilizers. Aquaponics will also integrate aquaculture with hydroponics, the soilless cultivation of plants.

This panel discussion is open to all conference participants and will provide the opportunity to have your questions and doubts cleared and share your ideas during the Q & A session.
